

The path to reconciliation starts with us.

Call for Participants

Circles for Reconciliation is a grassroots nonprofit that creates meaningful opportunities for First Nations, Inuit, and Métis (FNIM) and non-Indigenous people to connect through Talking Circles; safe, welcoming spaces grounded in Indigenous traditions of listening, sharing, and learning from one another.

Over seven weeks, participants come together for weekly 90-minute sessions to explore topics that deepen understanding, encourage honest conversations, and build mutual respect. Each circle includes five FNIM participants, five non-Indigenous participants, and two trained facilitators who help guide the discussions.

These conversations are more than just dialogue. They help build trust, challenge stereotypes, strengthen relationships, and inspire the shared commitment needed to advance meaningful reconciliation.

Reconciliation begins with conversation and every new participant brings a unique perspective that enriches the conversation. If you're curious, open to learning, and ready to engage with others in a meaningful way, we invite you to join a Circle. Reconciliation is an ongoing journey that belongs to all of us, and every conversation is an opportunity to move it forward, together.

Join a Circle now!

Circles are at NO COST to participants

Click the link to register:

<https://circlesforreconciliation.ca/pr-e-registration-information/>

or call (204) 414-3488 if you do not have access to an electronic device

Learn more:

<https://circlesforreconciliation.ca/>

Follow us on social media

